- MyPDO Monthly: Leadership Skills - Finding Your Unique Style – By National Postdoctoral Association
  - Most postdocs supervise and mentor graduate students, technicians or even undergraduates but the step up to becoming a team leader in academia, industry or in another work environment is significant. This webinar will introduce leadership styles and discuss the need for each of us to find our own unique style. Particularly when it comes to leadership, what works for men might not work for women. Many of us try to emulate a mentor or a leader we respect but that approach has the critical flaw that we are not that other person, no matter how hard we try. In a crisis, our weaknesses become apparent when we are not being authentic to our true selves. The path to finding our unique best leadership style comes from exercises in self-awareness, receiving feedback from others and leadership experiments.
  - Speakers: Angeliki A. Rigos, Ph.D., MBA (she/her)
